Claims Secretary's Name On Aluminum Contract

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Senator Thomas J. Walsh, conductor of the Teapot Dome oil investigation, has discovered evidence in a civil suit against the Aluminum Company of America which he believes will have a vital influence on the issue now being fought out in the senate judiciary committee—whether Secretary of Treasury Mellon is engaged in commerce because of his stock holdings and whether this fact should exclude him from office.

Walsh told the United Press today his evidence showed Mellon signed one of the contracts in an aluminum company merger in 1925 while he was secretary of treasury; that he held a dinner attended by all interested parties at his apartment here where the merger was consummated and that he took a trip to Canada to the power site on the Saginaw River, to be operated by the merged companies.

Walsh has a photograph on this trip showing Mellon with Arthur V. Davis, president of the aluminum company, W. L. Mellon, his brother, the late James B. Duke and a Mr. Allen, associated with Duke.

The evidence, Walsh said was taken in a suit filed in the New Jersey District Court against the Duke estate and the aluminum company by George D. Haskell, president of the Baugh Machine Tool Company, Springfield, Mass.

Haskell contended the merger violated the anti-trust law, injuring him as a consumer of aluminum and asked $15,000,000 damages. He obtained judgment for $3,000,000, but the judgment was later reversed by the circuit court of Philadelphia.

A deposition of Mellon's was introduced in the case as evidence, Walsh added. It shows that the parties who were in the photograph died at Mellon's apartment here and there agreed on the merger whereby the Aluminum company would control eight-ninths of the associated companies and the Duke estate one-ninth.

Walsh asserts the evidence refutes the claim of Mellon's supporters in congress that were ownership of stock in a concern does not conflict with the old federal statute that no secretary of treasury shall be directly engaged or interested in commerce or trade.

The evidence will be laid before the judiciary committee which has held two executive sessions within a week to settle the case and today is engaged in a third session.

The lineup in the committee is said to be close. Mellon's friends say seven committee members now favor the secretary's cause; six are against him and four are doubtful.

The new Walsh evidence is planned to be used with effect upon the doubtful senators.

The Mellon case was the absorbing topic of discussion on Capitol Hill, with the house in recess and the senate making slow progress on the farm relief bill.

FOUR SHOT AT LIQUOR PARTY

PAINTSVILLE, Ky., April 30.—Four persons, including three members of one family, were shot to death and a fifth was seriously wounded in a gun battle at Jenny Creek, in the hills near here, last night, according to reports received here today.

The victims were said to have been Lee Gibson, a hillman, his wife, his son, and another man known as Wallace Hanna. The latter's brother, Wayne, was wounded so seriously he may die, police here were advised.

The killings were said to have climaxed a liquor party.

STUEBENVILLE, O., April 30.—County authorities today resumed their search of the Ohio River for the body of Mrs. Frank Stocks, 43, of Port Homer, who was reported drowned when a boat was swept over a dike north of the city. THOMAS EDISON

ORANGE, N. J., April 30.—Somewhere in the United States there is a young man of a scientific turn of mind who some day may carry on the work of Thomas A. Edison. The inventor has started a search for him.

Charles A. Edison, son of the inventor and president of the Edison interests here, last night announced that his father was offering a free college scholarship, consisting of all tuition fees for four years, to the high school or preparatory school male student who submits the best answers to one of his questionnaires.

The statement said in part: "As the weight of advancing years falls on the great inventor's shoulders, he is seeking a youth of unusual capabilities who perhaps will have the genius to carry on the great work he has so well started. He wants to bring this unusual opportunity and this unusual youth together."

The governor of each state and the commissioners of the District of Columbia will select a candidate, who is to be the best representative of American manhood and who possesses the highest ability in scientific subjects during the school year, 1928-1929, in each commonwealth. These forty-nine winners will be given a free trip to the Edison laboratories here, where they will be entertained. Each one will receive a questionnaire prepared personally by Edison. And the one who best answers the questions will receive the scholarship. The winner may select his own technical school.

LIQUOR SQUADS ARE THREATENED BY MOB ON CLEVELAND RAID

Police Bring Aid; Raiding Policy Is Attacked

CLEVELAND, O., April 30.—Surrounded by a threatening crowd of 100, two liquor-raiding detective squads last night were forced to resort to night sticks and fists to prevent serious disorder.

Uninformed police were rushed to aid the detectives and despite a sullen attitude and threatening remarks from the crowd, the police met no resistance.

The gathering took place in a populous east side district when squads of detectives wrecked a distilling plant.

A short time before the detectives had raided a soft drink parlor operated by Joseph Consolo, 38, and confiscated a quantity of beer.

By the time they were ready to tear into the stills set up in the place across the street, a large crowd had gathered. They milled around the raiding police, booing and ridiculing them.

Sgt. John Mack, one of the three police officers against whom recent bomb attacks that precipitated a series of destructive raids was directed, was a member of the raiding crew.

Incensed by the remarks of the crowd, he plunged into the front ranks with his fists. Lieut. Frank Story grabbed a night stick from the hand of a patrolman and began wielding it vigorously.

The crowd fell back slowly. When the uninformed police arrived, a chain was formed to keep the crowd well back while the detectives wrecked two stills and poured a huge quantity of liquor into the gutters. Operators of the two stills could not be found.

CLEVELAND, O., April 30.—Counselman John M. Sulzmann today announced he would introduce legislation in the city council next week "to make it forever impossible for the police department to destroy property in enforcement of those whose property has been destroyed in recent axe raids."

At Monday's council meeting, Sulzmann, Dr. F. W. Walz, and James J. McGinty denounced the raids ordered by Safety Director Edwin D. Barry.

Barry was not present. "Uncivilized and un-American," was the white-haired Sulzmann's characterization of the recent liquor raids here.

"The police are carrying on a warfare against decent and respectable people who do not happen to believe in the Volstead act," Sulzmann declared. He denied that he wished to protect law violators from the legal penalty of their violation, but said he was protesting against the destruction of their property.

COLUMBUS, O., April 30.—Former Police Chief S. A. Lengel of Canton, carried to the state supreme court today his fight for reinstatement as chief of the Canton department.

Lengel was ousted by former Mayor Stanford Swarts, on Aug. 23, 1926, as an aftermath of the assassination of Don R. Mellett, editor of the Canton Daily News.

The ouster was sustained in September, 1926, by the Canton civil service commission and Lengel then filed suit in the Stark County common pleas court which ruled that he should be reinstated and granted back pay.

This judgment later was reversed by the court of appeals and Lengel came to the supreme court today seeking to have the appeals court decision set aside.

The former police chief's back pay, if he were reinstated, would aggregate several thousand dollars.

RACE WITH DEATH ENDS IN VICTORY

NEWTON, Ia., April 30.—A race with death, which started in the Mediterranean Sea and progressed across the Atlantic to Newton by steamship, airplane, train and motor car, ended in victory today when Mrs. Fred Jasper and Miss Stella McCord arrived and found their father, M. A. McCord, still alive.

MEXICAN REVOLT IS NEAR DISSOLUTION AS REBELS DESERT

General Topete Has Abandoned Cause Of Revolution

NOGALES, Ariz., April 30.—Deserted by most of its prominent leaders and faced with federal seizure of its last Sonora stronghold, the present Mexican revolt appeared to be near final dissolution today.

The latest blow to the rebel cause was the desertion of General Fausto Topete, revolting governor of Sonora. General Topete, his brother, General Ricardo, and several other lesser rebel leaders, crossed the international boundary line here last night.

Only General Francisco Borquez, rebel commander of Nogales, remained in the little rebel town across the line.

With General Topete and his brother when they crossed the boundary were Jesus Lizarraga, provisional governor of Sonora, and General Eduardo O. Garcia.

General Ramon Turbe, one of the leaders of the unsuccessful rebel drive on Mazatlan, Sinaloa, crossed into Arizona a few minutes before General Topete's party. Later, General Miguel Valle, who captured Juarez for the rebels shortly after the opening of the revolt passed through the customs.

It was reported here that General Topete wanted to make a determined stand at Masaca, Sonora but that after five days of bombing by federal planes his men retreated. The army of 7,000 had no pay since March 15 and were poorly provisioned. Then the column moved back to Navajoa, Sonora, and finally retreated from there when federals approached.

Pick-Up Passenger Shows Gratitude; Boy Exhausted

CHILLICOTHE, O., April 30.—Lying on exhaustion, Joseph Ferneau, 20, Ohio State University student from Bainbridge, related from his hospital bed here today how a young bandit held him up, robbed him, then bound him to a tree where he remained for twenty-four hours before he was found.

Ferneau said he was held up by a young man whom he gave a lift at Albany, late Sunday, while he was driving from Athens to Bainbridge. As they left Bainbridge, Ferneau said, the bandit drew a revolver, forced him to stop, then ordered him into the woods.

Ferneau was gagged, then bound. He was found late yesterday by Jimmy Johnson of McArthur who was hunting in the woods when he came upon the student. Johnson freed him and helped him into McArthur from where he was brought to the hospital here.

The boy's parents, alarmed at his failure to return from Athens where he spent Saturday night, were searching for him when the sheriff notified them he had been found.

Ferneau said he had no reason to suspect the young bandit when he picked him up.

MRS. DENNETT WILL APPEAL SENTENCE

NEW YORK, April 30.—An appeal from the fine of $300 imposed upon Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett for sending her sex pamphlet through the mails will be filed tomorrow.

Mrs. Dennett was still determined today not to pay the fine but to go to jail instead, because "the government is physically stronger than I am."

It appeared probable that a long court fight was ahead, unless the appellate court reverses the trial court's verdict.

Before being sentenced yesterday, Mrs. Dennett arose in Brooklyn federal court and registered a plea in her own behalf. She argued that her pamphlet, "The Sex Side of Life," was written for adolescents to help them in their sex problems.

Meanwhile the move to help Mrs. Dennett's defense, undertaken under auspices of the American Civil Liberties Union, was gaining momentum.

CHEMISTS PICTURE GIANTS IN FUTURE AT COLUMBUS MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., April 30.—The American Chemical Society, meeting here today, held out a few alluring prospects for the future—according to one's desires and hopes.

For instance, the time may be coming when a man won't have to build his own character, but can depend on chemistry to do it for him.

Then persons owning cows, if they're fortunate enough to have a little woodland, will have the cow-food problem solved for all time because cows will eat wood.

Still another prospect is that thieves will be changed into honest men, and the insane will be returned to society, minus their afflictions.

Lastly, the time is not far distant when ethyl alcohol will be derived, for commercial consumption, from wood and finally, future generations may become a race of giants, depending upon whether the chemists can discover what makes us stop growing.

Wood, chemically treated, is already being used for cow-fodder in some countries, according to C. L. Esselen, Boston chemical engineer who addressed the society.

Dr. J. S. Matthews of the University of Wisconsin, predicted that chemistry would be used to change and build character and in this connection he believes the insane will be made well and that the seasoned criminal will become a law-abiding citizen.

Future generations may be giants, one chemist said, if scientists can discover by synthesis, the cause of growth which lies hidden in the cell nuclei. The discovery, he said he believed, would hinge upon the balance of atoms which compose molecules which in turn compose every substance.

The question of what becomes of the country's corn crop, whether or not it goes into the bootleggers' bottles, as many believe, was answered by Major T. P. Walker, of Terre Haute, Ind.

"The chemical industry," Walker said, "is using 10,000,000 bushels of corn annually producing butyl alcohol, acetone, ethyl alcohol and other solvents, by fermentation." He added that this represents more than 25 per cent of the corn formerly used on the manufacture of spirituous liquors.

The chemist was pictured as an important ally to the farmer in an address by Charles H. McDowell, president of the Armour Fertilizer Works, Chicago.

"Prosperity of the farmer and chemist are bound together," he said. "The farmer needs the chemist to enrich his soil and the chemist needs the farmer to produce raw materials for his chemicals."

MISS ANNE MORROW NOW IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, April 30.—Miss Anne Spencer Morrow arrived here last night and is expected to remain for several days before continuing on to the Morrow estate in Maine, where her marriage to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh may take place in June.

The daughter of the American ambassador to Mexico was accompanied by her mother and sister Elizabeth. The party was driven immediately to the home of Mrs. Charles Long Cutler, Miss Morrow's aunt where she will remain during the Cleveland visit.

MEXICO CITY, April 30.—Friends here of Miss Anne Spencer Morrow expect her marriage to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will occur at North Haven, Me., about the middle of June.

United States Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, father of Miss Anne, will leave Mexico City for the United States about June 1, if he was understood, and friends of the young woman said they believed the marriage would take place ten days or two weeks afterwards.

RE-ENACTS WIFE'S DEATH; CONFESSES BURNING OF CORPSE

Quarrel Following Separation Ended In Tragedy

MT. VERNON, N. Y., April 30.—Earl F. Peacox, well-groomed, youthful radio repair man, confessed today, according to District Attorney Frank H. Coyne, to the murder of his estranged wife, Dorothy Heinzelman Peacox, whose half-burned body was found off the highway near Greenburgh last Saturday.

The confession, according to Coyne, was obtained after hours of questioning.

Not only did Peacox confess, Coyne said, but re-enacted the murder for the police. Peacox was formally booked on a charge of murder by the Mt. Vernon police.

According to Captain Phillip McQuillan, Peacox said he killed his wife in their apartment at Mt. Vernon, early Monday of last week, as the result of a quarrel.

Then according to the confession, he carried the body to an automobile, drove it to the Edwards estate, near Greenburgh, poured kerosene oil on the body, set it afire, and left.

Peacox's arrest was purely a matter of accident. He had moved out of the apartment last Saturday—the day the body was found—taking with him everything but the contents of one closet, according to Coyne.

When Albert E. Smith, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. James Clark, owner of the building, prepared to move into the vacant apartment last night, Smith found in the closet a blue suit, saturated with kerosene, a milk bottle half-filled with kerosene, a National Guard uniform, a .45 caliber pistol, and other articles, Coyne said.

Smith recalled that while visiting his parents-in-law Monday night of last week he heard a scuffle in the Peacox apartment above. Then he heard a heavy thud as some heavy object fell to the floor and a woman's scream.

The Clarks recalled that arguments in the apartment above were not unusual once a week, when Mrs. Peacox, who was separated from her husband, visited his apartment.

Smith paid no further attention, but, according to Coyne, he remembered seeing Peacox leaving the house later carrying a large bundle.

When Smith discovered the articles in the closet, he notified Captain Michael Silverstein of the Mt. Vernon detective force. Silverstein hurried to the vacant apartment and found under the stove a piece of linoleum with a large stain, apparently blood.

A general alarm was issued for apprehension of Peacox, whose wife's body had been identified yesterday afternoon by her mother, Mrs. Alphonse Heinzelman of Bronxville.

As Peacox was driving through Bronxville last night he was recognized by a Bronxville traffic officer who informed him he was wanted by the district attorney. He drove to White Plains, where detectives began questioning him.

The questioning continued to dawn, according to Coyne, when Peacox admitted the murder.

Psychology played an important part in obtaining the confession from Peacox, Coyne indicated.

After several hours of unsuccessful questioning in the grand jury room at the White Plains court house, Silverstein was summoned. In the semi-darkness of the inquisitorial room, Silverstein, bearing a large bundle, walked in amidst the rattling of windows, groans and the sound of falling objects.

But Peacox did not break immediately, according to Coyne. He was taken from the room, pushed into an automobile and driven to detective headquarters here. Once again the questioning was resumed. There was a repetition of the strange noises which emerged from the White Plains grand jury room. Still, Peacox stuck to his denial, according to Coyne.

Before dawn, Peacox was taken to the apartment which he had vacated last Saturday. He was questioned there, then taken back to the detective room here, and questioned further. At daybreak, Coyne said, Peacox broke down and confessed.

HARRY SINCLAIR TO SERVE PRISON TERM IN BAR-LESS WORKS

Model Institution In Virginia To House Oil-Man

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Harry Sinclair, millionaire oil magnate, will be spared the humiliation of looking at the world through prison bars during most of his three months term for contempt of the senate if he is a well behaved prisoner.

But his wealth and social standing will have nothing to do with the unobstructed view. The explanation is that he will serve his time in the work house at Occoquan Va., where bars are not the rule, rather than the District jail here, where they are.

Although the Occoquan institution houses more than 500 prisoners, it has less than a dozen barred cells, which are used infrequently for incorrigible inmates. Tractable prisoners work in the open during the day, sleep in dormitories at night and have access to a bath house and recreation hall in the evening.

In general appearance it is more like an army post or a segregated industrial colony than a prison, the result of advanced principles of penology.

While an unusually pleasant jail for these reasons, Sinclair will hardly find it an ideal summer resort.

In the first place the institution is located on the bald crest of a hill and the Potomac River. This section of the Potomac valley is not cool during the three summer months he will spend there even when well shaded. And he will work from eight in the morning until late afternoon.

The principal occupations of the prison are brick-making, automobile tag manufacturing and farming. Sinclair probably will get a clerical job connected with one of these three industries.

"We give every prisoner the work he can do best," Captain Morris C. Barnard, general superintendent of the District's penal institution's said.

The latest blow to the rebel cause was the desertion of General Faustino Topete, revolting governor of Sonora. General Ricardo Topete, his brother, General Ricardo Topete and several other lesser rebel leaders, crossed the international boundary line here last night.

Only General Francisco Borquez, rebel commander of Nogales, remained in the little rebel town across the line.

With General Topete and his brother when they crossed the boundary were Jesus Lizarraga, provisional governor of Sonora, and General Eduardo O. Garcia.

General Ramon Irujo, one of the leaders of the unsuccessful rebel drive on Mazatlan, Sinaloa, crossed into Arizona a few minutes before General Topete's party. Later, General Miguel Valle, who captured Juarez for the rebels shortly after the opening of the revolt passed through the customs.

It was reported here that General Topete wanted to make a determined stand at Masiaca, Sonora, but the General's days of fighting by federal planes his men retreated. The army of 7,000 had had no pay since March 15 and were poor. The column moved back to Navajoa, Sonora, and finally retreated from there when federalists approached.

CHEMISTS PICTURE GIANTS IN FUTURE AT COLUMBUS MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., April 30.—The American Chemical Society, meeting here today, held out a few alluring prospects for the future—aluring according to one's desires and hopes.

For instance, the time may be coming when a man won't have to build his own character, but can depend on chemistry to do it for him.

Then persons owning cows, if they're fortunate enough to have a little woodland, will have the cow-fodder problem solved for all time because cows will eat wood.

Still another prospect is that thieves will be changed into honest men, and the insane will be returned to society, minus their afflictions.

Lastly the time is not far distant when ethyl alcohol will be derived, for commercial consumption, from wood and finally, future generations may become a race of giants, depending upon whether the chemists can discover what makes us stop growing.

Wood, chemically treated, is already being used for cow-fodder in some countries, according to C. L. Esselen, Boston chemical engineer who addressed the society.

Dr. J. S. Matthews of the University of Wisconsin, predicted that chemistry would be used to change and build character and in this connection he believes the insane will be made well and that the seasoned criminal will become a law-abiding citizen.

Future generations may be giants, one chemist said, if scientists can discover by synthesis, the cause of growth which lies hidden in the cell nuclei. The discovery, he said he believed, would hinge upon the balance of atoms which compose molecules which in turn compose every substance.

The question of what becomes of the country's corn crop, whether or not it goes into the bootleggers' bottles, as many believe, was answered by Major T. P. Walker, of Terre Haute, Ind.

"The chemical industry," Walker said, "is using 10,000,000 bushels of corn annually producing butyl alcohol, acetone, ethyl alcohol and other solvents, by fermentation." He added that this represents more than 25 per cent of the corn formerly used on the manufacture of spirituous liquors.

The chemist was pictured as an important ally to the farmer in an address by Charles H. McDowell, president of the Armour Fertilizer Works, Chicago.

"Prosperity of the farmer and chemist are bound together," he said. "The farmer needs the chemist to enrich his soil and the chemist needs the farmer to produce raw materials for his chemicals."

MISS ANNE MORROW NOW IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, April 30.—Miss Anne Spencer Morrow arrived here last night and is expected to remain for several days before continuing on to the Morrow estate in Maine, where her marriage to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh may take place in June.

The daughter of the American ambassador to Mexico was accompanied by her mother and sister Elizabeth. The party was driven immediately to the home of Mrs. Charles Long Cutler, Miss Morrow's aunt where she will remain during the Cleveland visit.

MEXICO CITY, April 30.—Friends here of Miss Anne Spencer Morrow expect her marriage to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, to occur at North Haven, Me., about the middle of June.

United States Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, father of Miss Anne, will leave Mexico City for the United States about June 1. It was understood, and friends of the young woman said they believed the marriage would take place ten days or two weeks afterwards.

RE-ENACTS WIFE'S DEATH; CONFESSES BURNING OF CORPSE

Quarrel Following Separation Ended In Tragedy

MT. VERNON, N. Y., April 30.—Earl F. Peacock, well-groomed, youthful radio repair man, confessed today, according to District Attorney Frank H. Coyne, to the murder of his estranged wife, Dorothy Heinzelman Peacock, whose half-burned body was found off the highway near Greenburgh last Saturday.

The confession, according to Coyne, was obtained after hours of questioning.

Not only did Peacock confess, Coyne said, but re-enacted the murder for the police. Peacock was formally booked on a charge of murder by the Mt. Vernon police.

According to Captain Phillip McQuillan, Peacock said he killed his wife in their apartment at Mt. Vernon, early Monday of last week, as the result of a quarrel.

Then according to the confession, he carried the body to an automobile, drove it to the Edwards estate, near Greenburgh, poured kerosene oil on the body, set it afire, and left.

Peacock's arrest has purely a matter of accident. He had moved out of the apartment last Saturday—the day the body was found—taking with him everything but the contents of one closet, according to Coyne.

When Albert E. Smith, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. James Clark, owner of the building, prepared to move into the vacant apartment last night, Smith found in the closet a blue suit, saturated with kerosene, a milk bottle half-filled with kerosene, a National Guard uniform, a .45 calibre pistol, and other articles, Coyne said.

Smith recalled that while visiting his parents-in-law Monday night of last week he heard a scuffle in the Peacock apartment above. Then he heard a heavy thud as some heavy object fell to the floor and a woman's scream.

The Clarks recalled that arguments in the apartment above were not unusual once a week, when Mrs. Peacock, who was separated from her husband, visited his apartment.

Smith paid no further attention, but according to Coyne, he remembered seeing Peacock leaving the house later carrying a large bundle.

When Smith discovered the articles in the closet, he notified Captain Michael Silverstein of the Mt. Vernon detective force. Silverstein hurried to the vacant apartment and found under the stove a scuffle in the Peacock apartment above. Then he heard a heavy thud as some heavy object fell to the floor and a woman's scream.

A general alarm was issued for apprehension of Peacock, whose wife's body had been identified yesterday afternoon by her mother, Mrs. Alphonse Heinzelman of Bronxville.

As Peacock was driving through Bronxville last night he was recognized by a Bronxville traffic officer who informed him he was wanted by the district attorney. He drove to White Plains, where detectives began questioning him.

The questioning continued to dawn, according to Coyne, when Peacock admitted the murder.

Psychology played an important part in obtaining the confession from Peacock, Coyne indicated.

After several hours of unsuccessful questioning in the grand jury room at the White Plains court house, Silverstein was summoned. In the semi-darkness of the inquisitorial room Silverstein, bearing a large bundle, walked in amidst the rattling of windows, groans and the sound of falling objects.

But Peacock did not break immediately, according to Coyne. He was taken from the room, pushed into an automobile, and driven to indefinite headquarters.

Once again the questioning was resumed. There was a repetition of the strange noises which emerged from the White Plains grand jury room. Still, Peacock stuck to his denial, according to Coyne.

Before dawn, Peacock was taken to his apartment where he had vacated last Saturday. He was questioned there, then taken back to the detective room here, and questioned further. At daybreak, Coyne said, Peacock broke down and confessed.

Your MODEL T FORD is still a good car

THE Model T Ford led the motor industry for twenty years because of its sturdy worth, reliability and economy. Those same reasons continue to make it a good car.

As a matter of fact, nearly one-fourth of all the automobiles in use today are Model T Fords. Millions of them can be driven two, three and even five more years with reasonable care and proper replacements. Figures show that the average life is seven years.

Don't sacrifice your Model T, therefore, but take it to the Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of putting it in A1 shape. A very small expenditure may be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional service.

For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. This price includes new bearings, reboring cylinders and any other work necessary. Parts are extra.

Valves can be ground and carbon removed for $3 to $4. The cost of tightening all main bearings is only $6. The labor charge for overhauling the front axle is $4.50 to $5—rear axle assembly, $5.75 to $7.

New universal joint will be installed for a labor charge of $3. Brake shoes relined for $1.50. Rear spring and perches rebushed for $1.75. The cost of overhauling the starting motor is $3. A labor charge of approximately $2.50 covers the overhauling of the generator.

It will pay you, therefore, to see your Ford dealer and have him put your Model T in good running order. By doing so you will protect and maintain the investment you have in your car and get months and years of reliable transportation at a very low cost per mile.

Your MODEL T FORD is still a good car

THE Model T Ford led the motor industry for twenty years because of its sturdy worth, reliability and economy. Those same reasons continue to make it a good car.

As a matter of fact, nearly one-fourth of all the automobiles in use today are Model T Fords. Millions of them can be driven two, three and even five more years with reasonable care and proper replacements. Figures show that the average life is seven years.

Don't sacrifice your Model T, therefore, but take it to the Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of putting it in A1 shape. A very small expenditure may be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional service.

For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. This price includes new bearings, reboring cylinders and any other work necessary. Parts are extra.

Valves can be ground and carbon removed for $3 to $4. The cost of tightening all main bearings is only $6. The labor charge for overhauling the front axle is $4.50 to $5—rear axle assembly, $5.75 to $7.

New universal joint will be installed for a labor charge of $3. Brake shoes relined for $1.50. Rear spring and perches rebushed for $1.75. The cost of overhauling the starting motor is $3. A labor charge of approximately $2.50 covers the overhauling of the generator.

It will pay you, therefore, to see your Ford dealer and have him put your Model T in good running order. By doing so you will protect and maintain the investment you have in your car and get months and years of reliable transportation at a very low cost per mile.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding, and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York N. Y.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

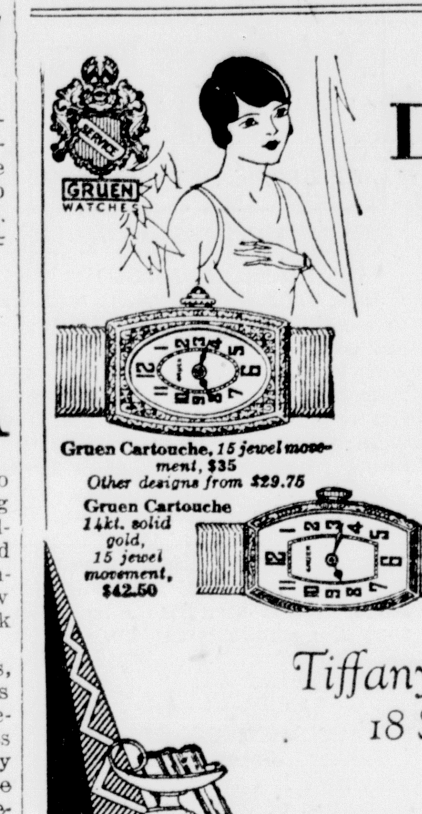

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875. Adv.

Mr. Hubbell talked of aviation, air ports, flying and insurance. He is one of the many speakers brought here to talk on aviation because of the agitation recently started here in the interests of establishing an airport in Xenia.

The Flyers will be trying for their fifth victory. The "Yellow Jackets," represented by a stronger nine than usual, feel that they have a better chance to win Wednesday than for several seasons.

Ralph Meyer is scheduled as the starting pitcher for Dayton while Brenton Turner, who pitched the Borstmen to a victory over Muskingum College recently, may be Cedarville's twirler for the match.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding, and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York N. Y.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

MY GOD SEES—Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights? For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth. Therefore also will I make thee sick in smiting thee, in making thee desolate because of thy sins.—Micah 6:11, 12, 13.

GETTING DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

Americans are usually practical, even in their idealism. They like to get down to brass tacks. So Ambassador Gibson, heading the American delegation at the preparatory disarmament meeting in Geneva, has cut through a fog of palaver and given life to a dead session by proposals that mean something.

The United States galvanized the disarmament conference in Washington in 1922 by a concrete program of naval reduction more drastic than any other power had expected. That got action.

The United States now, acting on the same hard-headed principle that the way to disarm is to disarm, proposes further reduction—as much as the other powers will stand for. It is not enough merely to "limit" armaments, Mr. Gibson says. There is no merit in the status quo. Cut them further. Not battleships alone. Not cruisers or submarines or airplanes alone. Everything.

Armament is relative. The actual number of soldiers or warships or airplanes is unimportant. The important thing is whether the other fellow has more soldiers or warships or airplanes than we have, or less. Due allowance must be made, in allotting the land, sea and air forces for nations in special situations. But generally speaking, the principle holds.

The ratio's the thing. Fix the ratio, then let everybody cut by agreement. If we're all lined up to the tune of 5-5-3-2, or whatever, each nation with its handicap, and then each of us cuts his armament one-half, we're all as safe as we were before. And look at the money and labor we save!

Does that sound sensible? England seems to think so, and the others are keenly interested. An armament conference held in a year or so, on this basis, with programs worked out in honesty and good will, might accomplish much.

FARM DEBENTURES

Many are puzzled by the farm-relief term, "export debentures." And no wonder. In the usual sense of "bonds," debentures are none too familiar. In the present case the word has a special meaning.

A "debenture" is, as the word implies, something owed. The debentures sought by farm organizations would be debts assumed by the government for exported foodstuffs.

Reduced to its simplest terms, this form of debenture is a subsidy or bonus on food exports intended to benefit farmers. It would be figured at half the import tariff rate on the same products. It would be paid nominally out of customs collections. Actually it would be paid out of Treasury funds. President Hoover maintains that most of it would go not to the producing farmers, but to the middlemen exporting food products.

Your BROADWAY

By Walter Winchell And Mine

NEW YORK—Among the newer rackets is a lease-breaking service sponsored by a man who from 9 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night is the treasurer of one of the legit houses in W. 45th street.

Garfinkle and his wife, by way of example, have a leased apartment on Washington Heights, but wish to move to Far Rockaway for the summer and give up the lease on the apartment. The superintendent is refusing to cancel the lease and the lease breaker is sent for.

The lease-breaker's first move is to arrange a "party" in his client's flat. The principal necessities are a powerful loud-speaker for the radio, a lady vaudevillean whose principal asset is the ability to laugh and scream loudly and merrily, although cold sober; her husband, who is a tenor, doubling on the piano, and another couple who use to be boozers, and for this particular job have the merit of being a lot heavier on their feet than they used to be.

The lease-breaker's two rules are that there must be no liquor of any kind on the premises and that no one must be in the apartment except married couples. Since there is virtually no legal limit to the noise which a man may make enjoying himself in his own home in a sober and moral way, about two parties and the intimation that he expects a lot of company during the next few months is generally all that is necessary to secure a cancellation. The usual fee for the service is a sum equal to one month's rent.

SKIDDLE-DE-SHOW
Coming with no thumping from the suburbs, "Mesin' Around," an all-colored musical is provided at the Hudson theatre by Louis Isquith. It is a carefully prepared production, containing few reliable, and is a series of song cues, with numerous interruptions of banal banter. The stepping, music and chatter offered indication of untrained and unskilled tutors, and the opera performers aroused little enthusiasm.

It probably will be among the casualties soon, but the zip of Cora La Redd of the Harlem night clubs, and the bo-vo-deo-doing of Monette Moore rate encouragement.

London chorines get 20 dollars per... When a debutante hissed an act on the Ziegfeld Roof the Variety editor offered her a job on his weekly... Joan Lowell is going to get even with all the people who were mean to her in her next book, which probably will be christened "Kicked Out of the Cradle."

NOT NEW, BUT CLEAN

Joe Laurie, Jr., recalls his visit for a train connection in a small southern town. He struck up a conversation with a girl on the platform.

"It puzzles me," said Joe, "how so beautiful a girl like you can exist in such a forsaken place like this. What do you do for excitement?"

"Oh," she drawled, "it's not such a bad little town. We have a new ice cream store on the corner, there's a barn dance every month, an show and then 'The Bat' comes back."

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

TWENTY TIMES AS MUCH

LOOKING AHEAD

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., may be over-optimistic as far as the present conduct of most business is concerned, but he has vision and is looking ahead when he says that the action which brought about a change of management in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana "emphasizes the conviction that the highest ethical standards are vital in business as they are in other relations of life."

The fact remains, despite the leadership of men like Rockefeller, that the emphasis in business is still too much on beating last year's figures.

SOWING BY PLANE

Timber companies in the northwest find it economical to convey thousands of acres into pasture. It is rough country, and a man on foot cannot sow grass seed over more than five to eight acres a day. A man in an airplane can sow 150 to 200 acres in the same time. The day of the flying farmer is at hand.

LONG DISTANCE TEACHING

University of Southern California has begun to teach aviation by means of the radio. About 250 have signed up for the course and the instruction will be given five evenings a week. Education actually pursues folks in this modern day. It is going to be harder and harder to remain ignorant. And yet some people seem to have a genius for not learning.

BUYING

We wonder, and perhaps smile, when we read that a Wisconsin woman, who was left a lot of money, spent thousands of dollars filling her home with wholesale lots of bric-a-brac, clocks and mirrors. It was filled from garret to cellar so that there was barely room to walk around. She had 50 house dresses, 30 pairs of shoes, and hundreds of pictures for which there was no room on the walls. Her estate was turned into a gift shop. But perhaps there was as much sense in her buying habits as in those of many of the rest of us. We all buy things we do not need just to gratify the sense of possession or to feed our vanity. We like to be known to own things, whether we use them or not. It would be a vastly less amusing world if folks were rational.

FEWER MURDERS, WHY?

"The certainty of being dealt with" That is the reason—and it is a good reason—why the murder rate in England is steadily decreasing.

What a splendid thing it would be if as much could be said for the United States! But our courts and judges do not move like the courts and judges of Great Britain.

TRUE MARRIAGE SAID TO WITHSTAND EVERY TRAGIC ASSAULT

By RABBI A. SILVER
Of the Temple, Cleveland, O.
(Abba Hillel Silver was born at Neinstadt, Schirwindt, Lithuania, —an. 28, 1893. He is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati and Hebrew Union college. From 1915 to 1917 he was rabbi of Congregation L'Shem Shamayim at Wheeling, W. Va. Since that time he has been rabbi of the Temple at Cleveland. He was in France during the World war at the request of the United States and French governments.)

Marriage which is built upon joyous love will withstand every assault of misfortune, poverty, trials, tragic mistakes, severe problems of adjustment and the ravages of time.

One of the great tragedies of married life is that so many women and men stop growing after marriage and frequently only drag the other down spiritually and intellectually.

Great love is never without compensation. But compensation is not the motive of great love.

Those who love greatly will simply not know what you are talking about when you speak of rewards. They love because for them it is the most necessary, the most spontaneous and altogether the most desirable thing to do. Compensations follow.

The first compensation is joy. True love is triumphantly joyous. This is true even after making full allowance for the inescapable sorrows which come into the lives of all lovers. In fact, it is the enslaving destiny of men with its full quota of pain and frustration and tragedy which lends the edge to their precious loves and to their holy hours of happiness. The love of a friend, the love of knowledge, the love of beauty, or the love of God is an inexhaustible source of joy.

Joy is one of the two real tests of love. Do you find joy in the person or thing or cause which you think you love? If the element of joy is not there, it is not love. It may be respect or admiration or toleration. It is not love.

It is this element of joy which makes love so powerful a motive in life. Sorrow and grief contract, enfeeble and inhibit us. They paralyze our powers of volition and action. Joy emancipates, happiness releases ener-

How to Achieve Beauty

BY ANNE HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The right type of sleeve will wonderfully improve the wrong type of arm, and quite as surely, the opposite is true. The wrong sort of sleeve will make an attractive arm look shapeless, or badly shaped and ugly.

These dogmatic observations may seem trite to you, if you have always known the type of sleeve you can or cannot wear. Or they may seem unnecessary, if you are one who believes that fashion dictates certain sleeves, and whether or not they are becoming you must wear them.

But many women have not taken the trouble to study their arms and general figure outlines in relation to sleeve styles and clothes. And most women know that any fashion which is definitely unbecoming to their own particular type is a foolish fashion for them to try. So for these I shall try to describe how sleeves may be chosen to flatter their wearers, or more especially, their wearers' arms.

"The long sleeve or no sleeve at all," is one rule that most women may safely follow. Any short, half or three-quarter length sleeve is a difficult sleeve to wear, although fashion is favoring some of them for summer. The short puff sleeve can be worn by the young girl or matron whose arm is slender and rounded, but it is distinctly a youthful style, and the older woman should never attempt it. Likewise the bertha collar, so fashionable just now, which drapes softly the upper arm and shoulder, leaving the lower arm bare, is for the youthful type, although the more mature woman whose arms are slender and whose figure and contour are youthful may wear it properly.

For very thin or very thick arms the long, graceful sleeve is best, and for the woman whose wrist bone is conspicuous it is a veritable godsend. It should be worn quite long and close-fitting snugly at the wrist. The open, flowing sleeve, such as many negligees have is attractive on arms that have pretty wrists and hands to emerge from them dramatically.

The short-sleeved woman, and the short, stout woman together, should not wear the large, blousy, peasant type of sleeve. Its fullness, even when gathered into a narrow wrist, makes arms look shorter, and wide outlines wider. The daintiness of the tiny woman can be completely eclipsed by the balloon effect of these sleeves.

And if you are short and small in figure be sure to have your sleeves, especially of your tailored and sports clothes, fit snugly. They should be as narrow and as neat as fashion, comfort and good tailoring will permit, to make your figure trim and clear cut in appearance.

But if you are large and your upper arms especially are heavy, do not wear too tightly fitting sleeves. (Have you not noticed how some plump-armed women seem to be bursting out of their sleeves at the shoulder?) Wear long, somewhat loose sleeves, straight in line, not shaped to follow the curves of the arm, and your arms will seem slimmer.

The vogue for easy fitting long sleeves that still holds good this season on dresses of thin materials, such as chiffon, lace and net, is a particularly flattering fashion for women of all types. It flatters the woman whose arms are long and thin, or badly shaped or blemished, as it does the woman whose arms are too thick. And it beautifully suggests that a pretty arm may be even prettier than it is.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—How much unemployment there is in the United States nobody knows. The difference in estimates runs into the millions.

Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, recently finished an investigation of the question, as chairman of the education and labor committee of the upper house of congress.

"We have absolutely no figures," says the senator, "as to the number of persons unemployed at any definite time."

"Here is a government without machinery for knowing whether it is afflicted with a disease to which might be added the cancer that destroys government."

There is considerable unemployment, anyway. It is increasing, too. Occasionally there is a little temporary improvement, but the general tendency is down hill.

All of official Washington is uneasy, if not much more than subconsciously, aware of it.

For instance, Chief Actuary Joseph S. McCoy, of the treasury, recently spoke to me of the continued rise in the tide of national prosperity as surprising, considering that more workers are idle than a year ago.

The truth is, the very thing which had made America so prosperous appears to be creating unemployment.

That is, the country's prodigious prosperity, unprecedented in history, is due to its tremendous rate of production; which, in turn, is due to its almost incredibly rapid development of labor-saving machinery — so rapid a development that more and more work is being turned out, every day, by fewer and fewer men.

A point has been reached where the nation's requirements can be supplied by a fraction of the total number of its workmen—on a 48-hour-a-week basis, at all events.

What the exact fraction is is uncertain, unemployment not yet having been gauged; but one thing is certain—it is a dwindling fraction.

The standard argument is that increased production breeds increased consumption; also that new occupations automatically create themselves as old ones disappear.

However, the best authorities are skeptical this time.

"It was true in the past, I know," says Congressman William F. Kopp of Iowa, chairman of the house of representatives labor committee,

"but that was before machine production had attained such terrific velocity. It is very questionable if the old rule holds good now."

According to Senator Couzens: "We are experiencing a problem and a problem no different from those occurring since the advent of machines in industry, but the difference is that today's developments are far more extensive and far more intensive than they have ever been in our history."

Commissioner of Statistics Ethelbert Stewart, of the labor department, giving warning, likewise, months ago, of the "shrinkage of employment" in many industries, questioned if new ones could absorb the entire labor surplus, and hinted at a "saturation point."

At best, and whatever the final outcome, all hands agree that the readjustment period must involve acute distress.

As Senator Couzens expresses it: "It offers little to the skilled musician to say that he, who has devoted his life to his art, may find a job in a factory where radio equipment is manufactured."

MAY DAYS

The following article I wrote last year. I am repeating it, by request, for I feel that I can write nothing further that would make you realize more fully the significance of May Day.

It is May Day. We are children of long, long ago, of prehistoric and primitive times.

Food is scarce, and the struggle for existence is terrible and constant. We, being the weakest, are sacrificed. Abortion, cannibalism, growing and abandonment to the elements, weed us out.

Those of us who belong to certain tribes and are destined to live, are mutilated by holes bored in our ears, noses and lips, tattooing, and deformities of our skulls and limbs. If we are born on unlucky days, or if we sneeze directly after birth, we are slaughtered, for we are considered unnatural and uncanny.

If we happen to be girls, our fate is worse than if we are boys, for the male element is glorified, and only a few of the girls are allowed to live to become mothers so the race will not die out.

May Day may be our death day.

It is May Day. We are the children of the Middle Ages.

Christ has come. "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven," He hath said.

Through the influence of Christianity, edicts against slaying us and delivering us into slavery are issued. A new feeling towards parenthood and children is being developed.

May Day is now fairer to us.

It is May Day.

We are the children of the middle of the Nineteenth century.

Our death rate is still high, but not nearly so high as it was, for up to this time little was understood of child hygiene, and the wars and pestilences had fostered indifference and the children suffered terribly.

But now things are better. Doctors are beginning to specialize in our disorders, to be able to care for us better. Societies for the prevention of cruelty to children have been formed; activities for our welfare are taken up by religious societies. Laws have been passed to cut down the labor of those of us under 12 who have to labor, to 10 hours a day. A children's court has been established.

May Day means a lot to us. We have oceans of fun! It is our festival day.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIE

What qualities should a girl look for when she chooses a husband?

I can tell her three things to avoid. For instance, don't pick a chap whose mother is afraid of him—afraid of his tantrums if things go wrong, afraid of his moods, afraid of his being rude to her guests—for such a chap will make life miserable for his wife and children. And don't choose a man who alibis, who says he failed in school because his teachers "had it in for him," and in business because his boss "wanted to put a statue in his place." That might happen once, but if it happened more than once you could rely pretty well on that man being a failure. He will try to alibi his way out of supporting you all his life. And don't choose the boy who is dominated by his mother—who has not a sturdy independence.

BLUE AND UNCERTAIN: It is all right to love your cousin, although in your case it is unfortunate because you don't seem to care for him. Don't try to forget him, but make no particular effort to interest him. In other words, leave him alone. Go with different boys. You will get more interested in them as time goes on. It was only fair to tell the second boy the truth about your feelings, but maybe, as your mother likes him, and you do yourself, to a certain extent, you will gradually grow to like him better and better.

UNDECIDED: Whether you answer the boy or not depends entirely on you. It seems a legitimate excuse to one who is so busy that she has a really dreadful time writing personal letters. You've never been like that, I take it. You won't compromise your dignity.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

OUT OF THE SHELL AND IN FOR A SWIM

Tommy Gosling quaked with glee at something he remembered.

"It was too bad to tease you and Dad so, but I can't help but laugh when I think of it. It didn't matter which way we turned, you two were close and your heels, scolding and calling; afraid we would do this, worried lest we do that, and all the time we all knew perfectly well what we were about."

"Not all of you, my dear Tommy," declared his father. "Don't you remember your foolish little sister, who was dragged off to the Muskrat's den, and all because she would insist on swimming all by herself to the other side of the pond?"

"My dear husband, don't speak of it," Mother Goose shuddered. "That was a sad day for me, I can tell you! I shall never forget my baby's cries for help as long as I live. I couldn't get to her in time because I had waddled upon the land in search of something that I never found. And you were too far away to aid her, either."

"Now, now, Mother, don't start to mourn all over again at this late date," cried Tommy. "It was a shame, but you know that those things will happen in the best regulated of Wild Geese families."

"Have you forgotten poor Mrs. Gray Goose, who lived in the goose house to us in Marsh Row? Only one of her children lived to grow up, out of her brood of six. How much better off you are! Look at all of us." (Tommy pointed to his brothers and sisters in the cove.)

"And say," continued Tommy, "isn't it about time to leave here? If you think it is yet too soon to leave on our long journey south, can't we at least fly over and watch the Loons race? Surely we have rested long enough to be strong enough to go that distance."

Mrs. Wild Goose looked at Gander and Gander looked at Mrs. Wild Goose.

"Well, wife," said he, "what do you think about Tommy's suggestion?"

"I think it is a very wise one for such a youngster to have made, and it is the very thing that I called you over here to talk about."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

MY GOD SEES—Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights? For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth. GETTING DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

Americans are usually practical, even in their idealism. They like to get down to brass tacks. So Ambassador Gibson, heeding the American delegation at the preparatory disarmament meeting in Geneva, has cut through a fog of palaver and given life to a dead session by proposals that mean something.

The United States galvanized the disarmament conference in Washington in 1922 by a concrete program of naval reduction more drastic than any other power had expected. That got action.

The United States now, acting on the same hard-headed principle that the way to disarm is to disarm, proposes further reduction—as much as the other powers will stand for. It is not enough merely to "limit" armaments, Mr. Gibson says. There is no merit in the status quo. Cut them further. Not battleships alone. Not cruisers or submarines or airplanes alone. Everything.

Armament is relative. The actual number of soldiers or warships or airplanes is unimportant. The important thing is whether the other fellow has more soldiers or warships or airplanes than we have, or less. Due allowance must be made, in allotting the land, sea and air forces for nations in special situations. But generally speaking, the principle holds.

The ratio's the thing. Fix the ratio, then let everybody cut by agreement. If we're all lined up to the tune of 5-5-3-2, or whatever, each nation with its handicap, and then each of us cuts his armament one-half, we're all as safe as we were before. And look at the money and labor we save!

Does that sound sensible? England seems to think so, and the others are keenly interested. An armament conference held in a year or so, on this basis, with programs worked out in honesty and good will, might accomplish much.

FARM DEBENTURES

Many are puzzled by the farm-relief term, "export debentures." And no wonder. In the usual sense of "bonds," debentures are none too familiar. In the present case the word has a special meaning.

A "debenture" is, as the word implies, something owed. The debentures sought by farm organizations would be debts assumed by the government for exported foodstuffs.

Reduced to its simplest terms, this form of debenture is a subsidy or bonus on food exports intended to benefit farmers. It would be figured at half the import tariff rate on the same products. It would be paid nominally out of customs collections. Actually it would be paid out of Treasury funds. President Hoover maintains that most of it would go not to the producing farmers, but to the middlemen exporting food products.

NEW YORK—Among the newer rackets is a lease-breaking service sponsored by a man who from 9 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night is the treasurer of one of the legit houses in W. 45th street.

Garfinkle and his wife, by way of example, have a leased apartment on Washington Heights, but wish to move to Far Rockaway for the summer and give up the lease on the apartment. The superintendent or renting gent refuses to cancel the lease and the lease breaker is sent for.

The lease-breaker's first move is to arrange a "party" in his client's flat. The principal necessities are a powerful loud-speaker for the radio, a lady vaudeville whose principal asset is the ability to laugh and scream loudly and merrily, although cold sober; her husband, who is a tenor, doubling on the piano, and another couple who used to be hoofers, and for this particular job have the merit of being a lot heavier on their feet than they used to be.

The lease-breaker's two rules are that there must be no liquor of any kind on the premises and that no one must be in the apartment except married couples. Since there is virtually no legal limit to the noise which a man may make enjoying himself in his own home in a sober and moral way, about two parties and the intimation that he expects a lot of company during the next few months is generally all that is necessary to secure a cancellation. The usual fee for the service is a sum equal to one month's rent.

SKIDDLE-DE-SOW

Coming with no thumping from the suburbs, "Mein' Around," an all-colored musical is provided at the Hudson theatre by Louis Isquith. It is a carefully prepared production, containing few reliable, and is a series of song cues, with numerous interruptions of a banal nature. The stepping music and chatter offered indication of untrained and unskilled actors, and the sepi performers aroused little enthusiasm.

It probably will be among the casualties soon, but the zip of Cora La Redd of the Harlem night clubs, and the bo-vo-deo-doing of Monette Moore rate encouragement.

Joe Laurie, Jr., recalls his visit for a train connection in a small southern town. He struck up a conversation with a girl on the platform.

"It puzzles me," said Joe, "how so beautiful a girl like you can exist in such a forsaken place like this. What do you do for excitement?"

"Oh," she drawled, "it's not such a bad little town. We have a new ice cream store on the corner, there's a barn dance every month, an snow and then 'The Bat' comes back."

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., may be over-optimistic as far as the present conduct of most business is concerned, but he has vision and is looking ahead when he says that the action which brought about a change of management in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana "emphasizes the conviction that the highest ethical standards are vital in business as they are in other relations of life."

The fact remains, despite the leadership of men like Rockefeller, that the emphasis in business is still too much on beating last year's figures.

SOWING BY PLANE

Timber companies in the northwest find it economical to convert thousands of acres into pasture. It is rough country, and a man on foot cannot sow grass seed over more than five to eight acres a day. A man in an airplane can sow 150 to 200 acres in the same time. The day of the flying farmer is at hand.

LONG DISTANCE TEACHING

University of Southern California has begun to teach aviation by means of the radio. About 250 have signed up for the course and the instruction will be given five evenings a week. Education actually pursues folks in this modern day. It is going to be harder and harder to remain ignorant. And yet some people seem to have a genius for not learning.

BUYING

We wonder, and perhaps smile, when we read that a Wisconsin woman, who was left a lot of money, spent thousands of dollars filling her home with wholesale lots of bric-a-brac, clocks and mirrors. It was filled from garret to cellar so that there was barely room to walk around. She had 50 house dresses, 30 pairs of shoes, and hundreds of pictures for which there was no room on the walls. Her estate was turned into a gift shop. But perhaps there was as much sense in her buying habits as in those of many of the rest of us. We all buy things we do not need just to gratify the sense of possession or to feed our vanity. We like to be known to own things, whether we use them or not. It would be a vastly less amusing world if folks were rational.

FEWER MURDERS. WHY?

TRUE MARRIAGE SAID TO WITHSTAND EVERY TRAGIC ASSAULT

Marriage which is built upon joyous love will withstand every assault of misfortune, poverty, trials, tragic mistakes, severe problems of adjustment and the ravages of time.

One of the great tragedies of married life is that so many women and men stop growing after marriage and frequently one drags the other down spiritually and intellectually.

Great love is never without compensation. But compensation is not the motive of great love.

Those who love greatly will simply not know what you are talking about when you speak to them of rewards. They love because for them it is the most necessary, the most spontaneous and altogether the most desirable thing to do. Compensations follow.

The first compensation is joy. True love is triumphantly joyous. This is true even after making full allowance for the inescapable sorrows which come into the lives of all lovers. In fact, it is the enslaving destiny of men with its full quota of pain and frustration and tragedy which lends the edge to their holy hours of happiness.

The love of a friend, the love of knowledge, the love of beauty, or the love of God is an inexhaustible source of joy.

Joy is one of the two real tests of love. Do you find joy in the person or thing or cause which you think you love? If the element of joy is not there, it is not love. It may be respect, or admiration or toleration. It is not love.

It is this element of joy which makes love so powerful a motive in life. Sorrow and grief contract, enfeeble and inhibit us. They paralyze our powers of volition and action. Joy emancipates, happiness releases ener-

How to Achieve Beauty

BY NINE, HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The right type of sleeve will wonderfully improve the wrong type of arm, and quite as surely, the opposite is true. The wrong sort of sleeve will make an attractive arm look shapeless, or badly shaped and ugly.

These dogmatic observations may seem trite to you. If you have always known the type of sleeve you can or cannot wear. Or they may seem unnecessary, if you are one who believes that fashion dictates certain sleeves, and whether or not they are becoming you must wear them.

But many women have not taken the trouble to study their arms and general figure outlines in relation to sleeve styles and clothes. And most women know that any fashion which is definitely unbecoming to their own particular type is a foolish fashion for them to try. So for these I shall try to describe how sleeves may be chosen to flatter their wearers, or more especially, their wearers' arms.

"The long sleeve or no sleeve at all," is one rule that most women may safely follow. Any short, half or three-quarter length sleeve is a difficult sleeve to wear, although fashion is favoring some of them for summer. The short puff sleeve can be worn by the young girl or matron whose arm is slender and rounded, but it is distinctly a youthful style, and the older woman should never attempt it. Likewise the bertha collar, so fashionable just now, which drapes softly the upper arm and shoulder, leaving the lower arm bare, is for the youthful type, although the more mature woman whose arms are slender and whose figure and contour are youthful may wear it properly.

For very thin or very thick arms the long, graceful sleeve is best, and for the woman whose wrist bone is conspicuous it is a veritable godsend. It should be worn quite long and close-fitting snugly at the wrist. The open, flowing sleeve, such as many negligees have is attractive on arms that have pretty wrists and hands to emerge from them dramatically.

The short-sleeved woman, and the short, stout woman together, should not wear the large, blousy, peasant type of sleeve. Its fullness, even when gathered into a narrow wrist, makes arms look shorter, and wide outlines wider. The daintiness of the tiny woman can be completely eclipsed by the balloon effect of these sleeves.

And if you are short and small in figure be sure to have your sleeves, especially of your tailored and sports clothes, fit snugly. They should be as narrow and as neat as fashion, comfort and good tailoring will permit, to make your figure trim and clear cut in appearance.

But if you are large and your upper arms especially are heavy, do not wear too tightly fitting sleeves. (Have you not noticed how some plump-armed women seem to be bursting out of their sleeves at the shoulder?) Wear long, somewhat loose sleeves, straight in line, not shaped to follow the curves of the arm, and your arms will seem slimmer.

The vogue for easy fitting long sleeves that still holds good this season on dresses of thin materials, such as chiffon, lace and net, is a particularly flattering fashion for women of all types. It flatters the woman whose arms are long and thin, or badly "capped" or blemished, as it does the woman whose arms are too thick. And it beautifully suggests that a pretty arm may be even prettier than it is.

WASHINGTON.—How much unemployment there is in the United States nobody knows. The difference in estimates runs into the millions.

And don't choose a man who alibis, who says he failed in school because his teachers "had it in for him," and in business because his boss "wanted to put a 'relative in his place.'" That might happen once, but if it happened more than once you could rely pretty well on that man being a failure. He will try to alibi his way out of supporting you all his life. And don't choose the boy who is dominated by his mother—who has not a sturdy independence.

BLUE AND UNCERTAIN: It is all right to love your third cousin, although in your case it is unfortunate because he doesn't seem to care for you. Don't try to forget him, but make no particular effort to interest him. In other words, leave him alone. Go with different boys. You will get more interested in them as time goes on. It was only fair to tell the second boy the truth about your feelings, but maybe, as your mother likes him, and you do yourself, to a certain extent, you will gradually grow to like him better and better.

UNDECIDED: Whether you answer the boy or not depends entirely on you. It seems a legitimate excuse to one who is so busy that he has no time to write personal letters. You've been like that, I take it. You won't compromise your dignity late date," cried Tommy. "It was a shame, but you know that those things will happen in the best regulated of Wild Geese families."

"Have you forgotten poor Mrs. Gray Goose, who lived in the next house to us in Marsh Row? Only one of her children lived to grow up, out of her brood of six. How much better off you are! Look at all of us." (Tommy pointed to his brothers and sisters in the cove.)

"And say," continued Tommy, "isn't it about time to leave here? If you think it is yet too soon to leave on our long journey south, can't we at least fly over and watch the Loons race? Surely we have rested long enough to be strong enough to go that distance."

Mrs. Wild Goose looked at Gander and Gander looked at Mrs. Wild Goose.

"Well, wife," said he, "what do you think about Tommy's suggestion?"

"I think it is a very wise one for such a youngster to have made, and it is the very thing that I had you over here to talk about!"

There is an old saying that youth will be served.

This was the case six years ago when Bobby Jones, at the age of twenty-one, reversed years of disappointments and won his first major golf tournament, the national open.

This year the challenge of youth will be renewed when Horton Smith, 21-year-old professional of Joplin, Mo., makes his bid for fame in the national open at Winged Foot late in June.

Meteorite explains in a word the rise of this tall stylist from the Ozarks who has yet to cast his first vote. Particularly during the last winter his performance during the gold rush to the links of California, Texas and Florida was surpassed only by the astounding feats of "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn. Incidentally, Smith's steadiness goes far toward offsetting the erratic, sometimes wonderful and sometimes weird, game of Wild Bill.

Unheralded, the young Missouri homebred made the trek to the Golden State in pursuit of the $40,000 in cash prizes which lured pros to the Pacific links from North, South and East. In California, Texas and Florida he won the Catalina, Island, Oklahoma City, Pensacola, Fort Myers and Florida open titles, was runner-up in the LaJolla, San Diego, Texas and South Central opens, finished third twice and fourth twice.

Only four times did Smith finish worse than fourth in seventeen starts. He won five titles as against four for Mehlhorn, although Wild Bill turned in some uncanny low scores.

His consistency in finishing in the money enabled the Joplin star to emerge from the winter season with a well-filled wallet, while dozens of more experienced professionals returned with empty pockets to take up their duties at various clubs. Smith was the big winner in the 10,000 mile barnstorming tour in search of the Golden Fleeca.

Horton Smith has the stuff of which champions are made. To list his qualifications, his drive is one of the best shots in his bag, attaining both length and perfection to an unusual degree. In chipping he is not far below Hazen while his putting, while not up to the rest of his game, is on the whole satisfactory. Aside from his mechanical ability, the Missouri marvel does not know the meaning of nerves and is well qualified from a physical standpoint to stand up under the grind of daily tournament play.

And to cap it all, Smith is blessed with the unquenchable confidence and optimism of youth. He was the youngest member of the Ryder Cup team. He came through the International Matches with flying colors, and the brilliant youngster is now getting set for his biggest test—the open at Winged Foot.

WITTENBERG SHUTS OUT ANTIOCH TEAM WITH FOUR SAFETIES

Miller Is Puzzle To Yellow Springs Hitters.

Airtight pitching by Miller combined with some heavy stick work enabled the Wittenberg College baseball team to register a 11 to 0 shutout victory over the Antioch College nine at Yellow Springs Monday afternoon.

It was the second victory for the Lutherans over Antioch this season.

The Wittenberg speed ball artist held Antioch to four scattered hits, three of which were made by Meyer, second baseman, struck out eleven opposing batsmen and walked three men.

For the first three innings neither team scored and a close game was in prospect. But in the fourth the visitors pushed across two runs as a result of two hits, one a triple by Rearick, and a walk. Two more runners were added in the fifth on a double, sacrifice and two passes.

Baker led off with a triple in the seventh and walked home when Edwards singled. Seven more hits resulted in three additional runs in the eighth and in the ninth.

Toomire started off on the mound for Antioch but gave way to Confer.

Wittenberg made a total of fourteen hits. Score:

ROMANCE ENDS IN WORKHOUSE

COLUMBUS, O., April 30.—A romance between the daughter of a Cornish, O. minister and a soldier stationed at Fort Hayes here, appeared to have gone "on the rocks" today.

The girl Ruth Ludwick, 18, of near Lancaster and daughter of the Rev. L. G. Ludwick, pastor of the Cornish United Brethren Church, was held in the city workhouse, while the soldier, Private John Tomlin, was doing "kitchen police" duty at the fort.

The girl was arrested at the Union Station when she could not give a good account of herself. Tomlin, who was with her, was released.

Miss Ludwick said she left home because she and her father quarrelled, and that she has been working in Columbus. Police said she and Tomlin recently visited her father and told him they had been married.

Tomlin today, however, said the wedding would be among tomorrow's social notes—if Fort Hayes officials will excuse him from "K. P." duties.

You perhaps have all the chicks you want for your own use, but why not start an additional lot and sell the pullets this fall at a nice profit?

The cockerels themselves will pay practically the entire feed bill when sold in 10 to 12 weeks and within six months after you get the chicks the pullets are ready to sell and you will have made a good profit with a small investment.

Come in and see us. We'll show you how it can be done profitably.

ROMANCE ENDS IN WORKHOUSE

COLUMBUS, O., April 30.—A romance between the daughter of a Cornish, O., minister and a soldier stationed at Fort Hayes here, appeared to have gone "on the rocks" today.

The girl Ruth Ludwick, 18, of near Lancaster and daughter of the Rev. L. G. Ludwick, pastor of the Cornish United Brethren Church, was held in the city workhouse, while the soldier, Private John Tomlin was doing "kitchen police" duty at the fort.

The girl was arrested at the Union Station when she could not give a good account of herself. Tomlin, who was with her, was released.

Miss Ludwick said she left home because she and her father quarreled, and that she has been working in Columbus. Police said she and Tomlin recently visited her father and told him they had been married.

Tomlin today, however, said the wedding would be among tomorrow's social notes—if Fort Hayes officials will excuse him from "K. P." duties.

Pullet Profit!

Did it ever occur to you that fall pullets usually sell for $1.25 to $1.50 each?

You perhaps have all the chicks you want for your own use, but why not start an additional lot and sell the pullets this fall at a nice profit?

The cockerels themselves will pay practically the entire feed bill when sold in 10 to 12 weeks and within six months after you get the chicks the pullets are ready to sell and you will have made a good profit with a small investment.

Come in and see us. We'll show you how it can be done profitably.

More Profit from a Better Crop

Every man who raises corn will be interested in the experience of J. P. Hanna, of Henry County, Illinois, who grew 10 bushels more corn per acre by treating his seed corn with Semesan Jr. His yield from each tenth acre is shown above at the right. The 7 bushels at the left were grown on his check plot from untreated seed.

Root rot infections which result in seedling blight, poor stands, plant-barrenness, nubbin-bearing stalks, rotted roots and down corn are controlled by Du Bay Semesan Jr.

Tests by Agricultural Experiment Stations and U. S. Dept. of Agriculture prove this. Seedling growth is invigorated; down corn decreased by its use. Dept. of Agriculture Circular 34 says it gave average increased yields of 1.9 bushels per acre on nearly disease-free seed, to 12 bushels on diseased seed.

Semesan Jr. makes early planting safer—it keeps seed from rotting even when soil is cold and wet.

Semesan Jr. costs less than 3c an acre for field corn. Applied as a dust at the rate of 2 ounces per bushel of seed field or sweet corn. Kills only the disease; harmless to seed. Ask for free Semesan Jr. pamphlet.

Maximum concessions in land armaments and drastic reduction of the navy is the Hoover administration's stand on the disarmament question, Ambassador Hugh S. While the position of the United States has been that the best method is limitation by category, Gibson told the delegates that as a compromise the United States is willing to accept the French thesis of total tonnage. SCIENTIFIC TREATMENT WILL BE AIM OF FEDERAL PRISON HEAD

By JOSEPH S. WARD, JR.
Central Press Staff Correspondent
BOSTON, Mass., April 30.—An era of progressivism in the administration of federal prisons, in which emphasis will be placed on rehabilitation of prisoners and crime prevention, rather than on mere punishment, is forecast in the selection of Sanford Bates, commissioner of corrections of Massachusetts, to be superintendent of federal prisons.

The decision to appoint Bates is said to be a victory in a campaign conducted by Assistant Attorney General Mabel Willebrandt, who has been trying for three years to make the division one of the "major scientific branches of the government." While disclaiming any desire to soften penalties or coddle prisoners, Mrs. Willebrandt is known to favor better housing and equipment, eight hours a day of constructive labor under normal conditions, and the payment to prisoners of a nominal wage.

One pet measure of Commissioner Bates in Massachusetts was a wage bill for prisoners, designed to stimulate production, help the state care for prisoners' dependents and inculcate industry and self-reliance.

Prevent Crime, His Aim
In 1926 Commissioner Bates established the first official crime prevention bureau to be connected with a prison department in this country. Recognizing the rising cost of caring for prisoners, he insisted that no solution could be reached without a systematic attack on the causes of crime and a serious study of inmates of institutions, as a basis for a campaign of crime prevention.

Mr. Bates established, for the first time in Massachusetts, a separate department for defective delinquents at the state farm, so that they received special treatment, less punitive and more remedial in its nature. An experiment at first, it has long since become an established and highly successful measure. He established university extension courses for prison officers and other workers, put into effect a merit promotion system for prison officers and officials, and revised the parole system.

Commissioner Bates has risen to his present position, as one of the outstanding penologists of the country, on his own efforts. Born forty-five years ago in Boston, of middleclass New England stock, he did not have the benefit of a college education. After being gradnated from high school, he got his law training at the Y. M. C. A. evening law school, and from 1906 to 1921 practiced that profession.

Served With Coolidge
From 1912 to 1916 he served in the Massachusetts house of representatives and senate, being a state senator at the same time as ex-President Coolidge. He later served in the constitutional convention, was street commissioner and penal institutions commissioner of Boston, and was appointed commissioner of corrections by Mr. Coolidge, then governor.

He is an ex-president of the American Prison association, and as such attended an international conference on prison reform in Europe in 1925, returning with firmly-fixed views in favor of American methods. He is a director of the American Unitarian association, and a former member of the American Crime Study commission. He was married in 1908 and has two children.

Persons familiar with his Massachusetts work have been enthusiastic about his appointment in charge of 18,000 federal prisoners, with responsibility for the administration of five great penal institutions, and the annual expenditure of 110,000,000.

ARTIFICIAL LEGS PROVIDED IN WILL

DEDHAM, Mass., April 30.—Ladies who lose their legs will no longer be sole beneficiaries under a sixty-nine year old trust fund originally established to provide such unfortunate with wooden limbs.

The fund was established in 1860 by Nathaniel Ingersoll Bowditch of Brookline, son of the famous navigator of the same name. He specified in his will that the income from the $5,000 fund be used to purchase wooden legs for patients, who had been obliged to submit to amputation.

"In the distribution of this income," the will said, "I should desire that female patients should be preferred to males."

Probate court here recently granted Massachusetts General Hospital authority to use the money for general purpose, it being explained that leg amputations were comparatively rare at the present time because of great advances in medical science.

Gone In 7 Years

"The Home of Thrift"

There is reputable authority for the statement that money and property left to the control of widows is gone, in the average case, in seven years. Loss of the husband's earnings is not the only cause of this. The average woman receives no training in finance and investments, and this, with her trustfulness, makes her an easy victim when the bait of promised fancy returns and quick riches are placed before her.

Every member of the family should be schooled in the knowledge that not one person in a thousand finds a short road to wealth—that practically all quick-rich promotions are intended swindles—that Safety is the first and highest consideration and that Rate of Return is secondary in importance. With these precautions much trouble may be avoided.

SCIENTIFIC TREATMENT WILL BE AIM OF FEDERAL PRISON HEAD

By JOSEPH S. WARD, JR.

Central Press Staff Correspondent

BOSTON, Mass., April 30.—An era of progressivism in the administration of federal prisons, in which emphasis will be placed on rehabilitation of prisoners and crime prevention, rather than on mere punishment, is forecast in the selection of Sanford Bates, commissioner of corrections of Massachusetts, to be superintendent of federal prisons.

The decision to appoint Bates is said to be a victory in a campaign conducted by Assistant Attorney General Mabel Willebrandt, who has been trying for three years to make the division one of the "major scientific branches of the government."

While disclaiming any desire to soften penalties or coddle prisoners, Mrs. Willebrandt is known to favor better housing and equipment, eight hours a day of constructive labor under normal conditions, and the payment to prisoners of a nominal wage.

One pet measure of Commissioner Bates in Massachusetts was a wage bill for prisoners, designed to stimulate production, help the state care for prisoners' dependents and inculcate industry and self-reliance.

Prevent Crime, His Aim

In 1926 Commissioner Bates established the first official crime prevention bureau to be connected with a prison department in this country. Recognizing the rising cost of caring for prisoners, he insisted that no solution could be reached without a systematic attack on the causes of crime and a serious study of inmates of institutions, as a basis for a campaign of crime prevention.

Mr. Bates established, for the first time in Massachusetts, a separate department for defective delinquents at the state farm, so that they received special treatment, less punitive and more remedial in its nature. An experiment at first, it has long since become an established and highly successful measure. He established university extension courses for prison officers and other workers, put into effect a merit promotion system for prison officers and officials, and revised the parole system.

Farm Notes

FERTILIZER IMPROVES GARDEN

The liberal application of a complete fertilizer will not only increase the crop yield but will improve the quality of the vegetables and hasten their maturity.

A complete commercial fertilizer of 6-6-6 analysis for light sandy soils and one of 4-12-4 analysis for loam and clay soils of heavier texture are recommended by Roy Magruder, assistant in the horticultural department of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station. A variation of 1 or 2 per cent in the amount of nitrogen, phosphoric acid or potash, as shown by the analysis will not likely affect the results provided a liberal amount is applied.

From twenty-five to thirty-five pounds of fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of space should be broadcast on top of the plowed or spaded ground before it is worked down and level for planting. This will mix the fertilizer with the soil and prevent it from damaging the tender seedling.

This quantity of fertilizer will usually provide sufficient plant food for one crop, but if two or three crops are grown on the same soil in one year it may be advisable to apply one-half as much fertilizer for the second crop. If the seeds are already planted the fertilizer may be spread between the rows and then mixed in the soil by deep hoeing or shoveling.

The best results from commercial fertilizers are obtained when the soil is well drained and supplied with organic matter. The organic matter in the soil may be increased by applying manure or growing a green crop of rye to be plowed or spaded under in the spring. Rye for this purpose is sown broadcast after the first killing frost in the fall.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

I'M STILL FOR LINDBERGH

The tide of public worship of Charles Lindbergh is beginning to slacken a little. A newspaper recently attacked the hero in quite strong language for splashing mud on waiting admirers and pretending not to see the people who had hoped to greet him in person when he came in from a long flight. Some months ago the one American editor who dared criticize Lindbergh lost most of his circulation and all of his goodwill in his home town, and was execrated throughout the civilized world for his daring. That was Gene Howe, son of old Ed. Howe, who said in the print that Lindbergh had the swelled head.

Such tides are bound to turn, of course.

Lindbergh remains, for me, one of the two most perfect spectacular heroes in American history. The other one is John Paul Jones, and to tell you the truth, I think I prefer Lindbergh to Jones.

I still want Lindbergh in the cabinet, as secretary of aviation.

I'd still like to see him given absolute freedom of the country, with no obligation to obey any law. I'd just like to see how such a privilege would affect such a young man.

I think it would result in Lindbergh's becoming the most law-abiding citizen of the whole world. He wouldn't even dare to swoop low over a city, for fear of violating a local ordinance which he was not bound to obey.

It's easy to be for a hero when he seems divine, and you know nothing of any fault or frailty that may be his.

UNDERGROUND

A LOVE AND MYSTERY STORY

BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

READ THIS FIRST:

The plot concerns some weird noises beneath a supposedly haunted house, in Byford Moor. One day Brown, a romantic young clerk, heard a rough-looking fellow say to another: "After her! And— if she's troublesome—don't be particular what you do to her!" Brown trails the girl to the haunted house and disappears. His companions, Rupert and Charlie, with a laborer named Ted, out of work, try to discover the mystery of the house and why the girl is there. Rupert returns to the inn, where the three are staying. One of the conspirators, Simon Brill, is there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII

Half way back he passed, on his right, a mean little building which one would hardly have recognized even for a humble public house but for a decayed sign bearing the faint memory of a Georgian king upon it. This was the inn towards which Ted, some way behind, was slowly hobbling. A hundred yards beyond the inn, a girl stood at a corner. At first Rupert wondered whether this were the girl who had inspired their mad adventure, and his steps instinctively quickened. Was he at last to have his own glimpse of the adorable Venus?

The girl was undeniably pretty. Yes, she looked most attractive as she stood at the corner, gazing down the lane towards him. But she belonged to the golden-haired, blue-eyed, rather plump variety, and did not fit into the conception planted in his mind by the descriptions he had listened to. He missed the "intangible something." He missed, also, an atmosphere of efficiency. And would their own special Venus have given way to the weakness of tears on such a sunny morning as this? For it was clear to see that the pretty, fair-haired, blue-eyed girl at the corner had been crying.

A moment later, she disappeared, and when he reached the corner there was no sign of her. He continued on his way, vaguely wondering. An idea occurred to him. Was her little glove button he had in his pocket? Then he laughed at himself, and at the ridiculous significance with which he was investing everything he encountered.

He was walking through the outskirts of the village now, and a welcome sight abruptly intruded itself before him. Charlie had come down to wake up at last, and had come to meet him.

"Hallo! You think you're bright and early, don't you?" exclaimed Charlie. "Where've you been?"

"To Coomber House," replied Rupert.

"Ho! Catch any worms?"

"I'll tell you in a minute. Anything happened your end?"

Charlie nodded. "It was a matter of fact, it was the late bird who caught the worm this time," he said, beaming. "Only, may heaven forgive me for describing what I've caught as a worm!"

"Is it Brown, by any chance?"

"Brown? No! Why, wasn't he in the shed?"

"No. But I'll tell you all about that in a minute. Let's hear your news first."

"Righto. My news is—her!"

"You mean—"

"I do, sir. The Wonderful One is actually staying at our hotel. My boy—she can stand the daylight! She's—well, look at my hair!"

He lowered his hatless head.

"It certainly has the morning gloss upon it," commented Rupert. "I should say so! I caught sight of her from my window, just as she arrived, and gave it an extra shine. But that's not all, I tell you, we're having a wonderful breakfast party, and for goodness' sake, hurry! She's at one table. We're fixed at the next. And at another, is old Simon Brill."

"Who's old Simon Brill excite you?" asked Rupert.

"Wake up!" retorted Charlie. "I thought he never came down to breakfast? But he's come down this morning—especially to honor and observe us. I may be fat, old fellow, but I'm not entirely a fool."

"I see," nodded Rupert. "Yes—you're probably right. This is going to be an interesting meal. Before it's over, we'll see if we can improve our acquaintance with these interesting people."

"You can have the old man," suggested Charlie, "and I'll take the girl. Well, that's my news. Now what about yours?"

"Mine's even more arresting. I think," replied Rupert. "Listen. When I got to the shed—"

"What happened?" asked Charlie. "I heard a lark singing. It was wonderful. And, though I looked for the lark everywhere, I couldn't spot the little blighter."

Charlie's mouth began to open. "For heaven's sake, don't look like a stuck pig," murmured Rupert. "I didn't spot the lark, but I've this moment spotted something else. That little fellow who was doped at Newcastle has just come round the church and is looking at us."

Charlie Carfax was not, as has been implied, the only riser on this historic morning at the Yellow

Stag to devote a few extra seconds to the question of personal toilette. Sally had preceded him, by about an hour, along the road of vanity, inspired by her glimpse of Rupert Blake's manly back from her lofty bedroom window; and although it is not to be assumed that Sally imagined some fairy godmother would change her into a princess before the day was out, she was quite owner of the manly back would duly prostrate himself before her dazzling beauty, even the inaccessible can make one thrill, and can impart a touch of glamour to the prosaic business of sweeping and dusting and serving.

It seemed, indeed, that special events were to justify Sally's vague unattached to the manly back. Unattached, at least, so far as Sally's limited vision could embrace. Sally had no eyes to perceive the inner workings of Fate. Mr. Simon Brill had helped to make the morning unusual by ringing his bell at half-past seven and demanding hot water. This was the first time he had done so since his arrival at the inn, and breakfast in bed had appeared to be an unbreakable habit with him.

"Goin' to take a mornin' walk, sir?" Sally had ventured, as she brought in the steaming can.

"And why not?" retorted Simon Brill. "Do you think I'm a hundred?"

Then, a little before eight, another interesting personality had turned up in a little bright green two-seater. Shades of Lady Violet! Was even she so beautiful? When the new visitor signed her name in the register, after booking a room and inquiring at what time breakfast was served, Sally looked over her shoulder, expecting anything up to a duchess. But if the visitor possessed a title, her entry did not admit it. It merely ran:

"Josephine Marlowe, London."

And, just as she finished writing it, the big, tublike youth descended the stairs, and stopped suddenly.

"E's it!" concluded Sally. Not Lord Maple-Hurlingham, himself, had betrayed more emotion when Lady Violet had pushed aside the purple curtain. But Sally had had time, the big, tublike youth had recovered himself almost at once, and when the lady had raised her head and seen him, his expression had reverted to the prosaic gentility of a man who is pleased with everybody in general, but nobody in particular. As Charlie, himself, confessed to his most intimate friends, there were given moments when he was not quite a fool.

At (thought Sally), but what had he done afterwards? While the new visitor was being shown to her room? Sally had seen him! He had lingered in the hall, and when he had imagined himself alone had dived for the register. Well, well, she didn't blame him. On the contrary, she sympathized with him, for, like herself, he had his cross to bear. Before he had any chance with a lovely lady like this, he needed a puncture so's to get flat.

Charlie had continued to linger in the hall, and then had wandered casually about the grounds in the hope of seeing this interesting new visitor again. But he had only caught one more glimpse of her before going to meet Rupert, and that had been as she had descended from her room, and entered the coffee room. Through the doorway he had watched her take her seat, noting her table, and a moment later he had stepped aside to allow Simon Brill to enter the room. Then, feeling that haste should be made to bring Rupert's more terrible brain to bear upon this absorbing breakfast party, he had left the hotel and gone to meet his friend.

And now—observed by a little man in a loud check suit—he and Rupert were re-entering the hotel, and making their way into the coffee room.

Simon Brill looked up as they entered. There was no sign of recognition on his face. This surprised Charlie, who nodded to him automatically. Simon Brill inclined his head a little, but the return greeting suggested nothing more than the ordinary morning courtesy of a stranger.

"Why won't old Brill recognize us?" murmured Charlie, as they took their seats.

"If he won't, he'll have to find out the reason," replied Rupert. "But perhaps he actually doesn't."

"Nonsense!" He must, after our jaw last night!"

"I didn't notice much twilight in the shed," retorted Rupert.

Whooping cough caused the death of Arnold Edward Holland, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Russell Holland, who died at his parents' home on the Lower Bell-Pike at 5:50 o'clock Tuesday morning following a week's illness.

The child was born April 26, 1928 and besides his parents is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Ruth Emma, Lucy, Sherman and Davis Holland.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

"Oh, what a brain!" sighed Charlie, enviously. "When you die, you must leave it to the nation!"

"All the same," said Rupert, "my private opinion is this. He does recognize us, but prefers to pretend that he does not. Later on— if he recall each other to each other—he can claim as his excuse the darkness of the shed."

"I don't see why he doesn't acknowledge us at once, then," answered Charlie.

"Do you see why a beautiful girl dopes a man in a check suit?" queried Rupert, keeping his voice low. "Or why pigs fly?" he added. "Or why Brown wasn't in the shed this morning when I went there?"

For Rupert had briefly narrated his adventures at Coomber House during the last few minutes of the journey back.

Underworld Revenge

Such tides are bound to turn, of course. Lindbergh remains, for me, one of the two most perfect spectacular heroes in American history. The other one is John Paul Jones, and to tell you the truth, I think I prefer Lindbergh to Jones.

I still want Lindbergh in the cabinet, as secretary of aviation. I'd still like to see him given absolute freedom of the country, with no obligation to obey any law. I'd just like to see how such a privilege would affect such a young man. I think it would result in Lindbergh's becoming the most law-abiding citizen of the whole world. He wouldn't even dare to swoop low over a city, for fear of violating a local ordinance which he was not bound to obey.

It's easy to be a hero when he seems divine, and you know nothing of any fault or frailty that may be his.

See whether you can still preserve a sense of proportion when you learn that Lindbergh is human, slightly irritable, engaged to be married, bored by adulation, and seriously immersed in a money-making enterprise.

The poor fellow must make a living, marry, rear a family and attend to his career, like the rest of us. Don't think less of him because you learn that he eats and spends money and hasn't any wings.

Now is the time to begin appreciating Lindbergh.

Family Killer?

Jacob Vanderburg, aged 17, of Gastonia, N. C., is being held by the police charged with the alleged murder of his father, mother, two sisters and a brother and completing the crime by setting fire to their farm house last winter. Both murder and arson are punishable by death in North Carolina.

Charles Carfax was not, as has been implied, the only rider on this historic morning at the Yellow

Farm Notes

FERTILIZER IMPROVES GARDEN

The liberal application of a complete fertilizer on many a city garden will not only increase the crop yield but will improve the quality of the vegetables and hasten their maturity.

A complete commercial fertilizer of 6-6-6 analysis for light sandy soils and one of 4-12-4 analysis for loam and clay soils of heavier texture are recommended by Roy Magruder, assistant in the horticultural department of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station. A variation of 1 or 2 per cent in the amount of nitrogen, phosphoric acid or potash, as shown by the analysis will not likely affect the results provided a liberal amount is applied.

From twenty-five to thirty-five pounds of fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of space should be broadcast on top of the plowed or spaded ground before it is worked down fine and level for planting. This will mix the fertilizer with the soil and prevent it from damaging the tender seedling.

This quantity of fertilizer will usually provide sufficient plant food for one crop, but if two or three crops are grown on the same soil in one year it may be advisable to apply one-half as much fertilizer for the second crop. If the seeds are already planted the fertilizer may be spread between the rows and then mixed in the soil by deep hoeing or shallow spading.

The best results from commercial fertilizers are obtained when the soil is well drained and supplied with organic matter. The organic matter in the soil may be increased by applying manure or growing a green crop of rye to be plowed or spaded under in the spring. Rye for this purpose is sown broadcast after the first killing frost in the fall.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

I'M STILL FOR LINDBERGH

The tide of public worship of Charles Lindbergh is beginning to slacken a little. A newspaper recently attacked the hero in quite strong language for splashing mud on waiting admirers and pretending not to see the people who had hoped to greet him in person when he came in from a long flight. The newspaper got away with it grandly. Some months ago the one American editor who dared criticize Lindbergh lost most of his circulation and all of his goodwill in his home town, and was execrated throughout the civilized world for his daring. That was Gene Howe, son of old Ed. Howe, who said in print that Lindbergh had the swelled head.

Such tides are bound to turn, of course. Lindbergh remains, for me, one of the two most perfect spectacular heroes in American history. The other one is John Paul Jones, and to tell you the truth, I think I prefer Lindbergh to Jones.

I still want Lindbergh in the cabinet, as secretary of aviation. I'd still like to see him given absolute freedom of the country, with no obligation to obey any law. Now is the time to begin appreciating Lindbergh.

Family Killer?

Jacob Vanderburg, aged 17, of Gastonia, N. C., is being held by the police charged with the alleged murder of his father, mother, two sisters and a brother and completing the crime by setting fire to their farm house last winter. Both murder and arson are punishable by death in North Carolina.

Charles Carfax was not, as has been implied, the only rider on this historic morning at the Yellow

Stag to devote a few extra seconds to the question of personal toilette. Sally had preceded him, by about an hour, along the road of vanity, inspired by her glimpse of Rupert Blake's manly back from her lofty bedroom window; and although it is not to be assumed that Sally imagined some fairy godmother would change her into a princess before the day was out so that the owner of the manly back would duly prostrate himself before her dazzling beauty, even the inaccessible can make one thrill, and can impart a touch of glamour to the prosaic business of sweeping and dusting and serving.

It seemed, indeed, that special events were to justify Sally's vague presidential events that were quite unattached to the manly back. (I'm attached, at least, so far as Sally's limited vision could embrace. Sally had no eyes to perceive the inner workings of Fate. Mr. Simon Brill had helped to make the morning unusual by ringing his bell at half-past seven and demanding not water. This was the first time he had done so since his arrival at the inn, and breakfast in bed had appeared to be an unbreakable habit with him.

"Goin' to take a mornin' walk, sir?" Sally had ventured, as she brought in the steaming can.

"And why not?" retorted Simon Brill. "Do you think I'm a hundred?"

Then, a little before eight, another interesting personality had turned up in a little bright green two-seater. Shades of Lady Violet! Was even she so beautiful? When the new visitor signed her name in the register, after booking a room and inquiring at what time breakfast was served, Sally looked over her shoulder, expecting anything up to a duchess. But if the visitor possessed a title, her entry did not admit it. It merely ran:

"Josephine Marlowe, London."

And, just as she finished writing it, the big, tublike youth descended the stairs, and stopped suddenly.

"E's it!" concluded Sally. Not Lord Maple-Hurlingham, himself, had betrayed more emotion when Lady Violet had pushed aside the purple curtain. But, Sally had not tied the big tublike youth had recovered himself almost at once, and when the lady had raised her head and seen him, his expression had reverted to the prosaic gentility of a man who is pleased with everybody in general, but nobody in particular. As Charlie, himself, confessed to his most intimate friends, there were given moments when he was not quite a fool.

Ah (thought Sally), but what had he done afterwards? While the new visitor was being shown to her room? Sally had seen him! He had lingered in the hall, and when she had imagined himself alone, he had dived for the register. Well, well, she didn't blame him. On the contrary, she sympathized with him, for, like herself, he had his cross to bear. Before he had any chance with a lovely lady like this, he needed a puncture so to get flat!

Charlie had continued to linger in the hall, and then had wandered casually about the grounds in the hope of seeing this interesting new visitor again. But he had only caught one more glimpse of her before going to meet Rupert, and that had been as she had descended from her room and entered the coffee room. Through the doorway he had watched her take her seat, noting her table, and a moment later he had stepped aside to allow Simon Brill to enter the room. Then, feeling that haste should be made to bring Rupert's more terrible brain to bear upon this absorbing breakfast party, he had left the hotel and gone to meet his friend.

U. S. MAYOR THINKS SIDEWALK CAFE ALL COUNTRY NOW NEEDS

By GEORGE KENT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, April 30.—The lack of sidewalk cafes is what's wrong with American cities, the United Press learned from John L. Davie, Mayor of Oakland, Cal., the only American to attend the International Congress of Cities at Seville, Spain.

"It's nice to sit in a cafe and have something," the mayor said. "It's comfortable. The sun shines. A go-getter stops panting. The world resumes its normal shape. In America, there are no facilities for being lazy and laziness is fully as important as diligence—in its proper place. Waiters flash the checks before the diner is half through with his meal."

"In Europe they do not care how long you sit. Cafes help the digestion and improve the philosophy. If there were more tables in the sun, there would be more optimism."

Mayor Davie, who attended the congress in company with 200 mayors of as many cities in various parts of the world, said that America could learn a lot from European cities. He thought Europe, for example, handled traffic more efficiently than America.

Cops Not Semaphores
"True, we have semaphores and other trick devices," he said. "But Europe has cops. They control the vehicular come and go. The proof of the superiority of the European system is that there are fewer accidents here."

Mayor Davie reverted to cafes, deploring the stupidity of a "prohibition law which doesn't prohibit." He said that California was the greatest grape-growing country in the world and if prohibition had not interfered would be producing better wines than France. Before the war France was buying California wines and exporting them to America.

"What harm is there if some people get together and take a few glasses of wine? It is positively beneficial."

"But cafes are not possible in America now. American cities haven't the space. Nor have they anything to serve in cafes. You know, I like the way European cities care for their people. The large parks, the wide boulevards, the sidewalks with space for cafe tables."

From Paris, Mayor Davie went to Hamburg to christen the new Hamburg-American freighter, City of Oakland, in a new service of which Oakland will be the Western terminus.

"SURE SHOT SUSIE"

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 30.—The University of Tennessee co-ed rifle team has one member who is known as "Sure Shot Susie."

Her real name is Estelle Galbreath. The U. T. co-ed set a mark for her team-mates to shoot by scoring ninety-nine points out of a possible one hundred in a recent marksmanship match with girls' rifle teams of Louisiana State University, University of Maryland, Vermont University and Northwestern University. Included in her scoring were 15 consecutive bulls-eyes.

U. S. MAYOR THINKS SIDEWALK CAFE ALL COUNTRY NOW NEEDS

By GEORGE KENT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, April 30.—The lack of sidewalk cafes is what's wrong with American cities, the United Press learned from John L. Davie, Mayor of Oakland, Cal., the only American to attend the International Congress of Cities at Seville, Spain.

"It's nice to sit in a cafe and have something," the mayor said. "It's comfortable. The sun shines. A go-getter stops panting. The world resumes its normal shape. In America, there are no facilities for being lazy and laziness is fully as important as diligence—in its proper place. Waiters flash the checks before the diner is half through with his meal."

"In Europe they do not care how long you sit. Cafes help the digestion and improve the philosophy. If there were more tables in the sun, there would be more optimism."

Mayor Davie, who attended the congress in company with 200 mayors of as many cities in various parts of the world, said that America could learn a lot from European cities. He thought Europe, for example, handled traffic more efficiently than America.

Cops Not Semaphores
"True, we have semaphores and other trick devices," he said. "But Europe has cops. They control the vehicular come and go. The proof of the superiority of the European system is that there are fewer accidents here."

Mayor Davie reverted to cafes, deploring the stupidity of a "prohibition law which doesn't prohibit." He said that California was the greatest grape-growing country in the world and if prohibition had not interfered would be producing better wines than France. Before the war France was buying California wines and exporting them to America.

"What harm is there if some people get together and take a few glasses of wine? It is positively beneficial."

"But cafes are not possible in America now. American cities haven't the space. Nor have they anything to serve in cafes. You know, I like the way European cities care for their people. The large parks, the wide boulevards, the sidewalks with space for cafe tables."

From Paris, Mayor Davie went to Hamburg to christen the new Hamburg-American freighter, City of Oakland, in a new service of which Oakland will be the Western terminus.

"SURE SHOT SUSIE"
KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 30.—The University of Tennessee co-ed rifle team has one member who is known as "Sure Shot Susie."

Her real name is Estelle Galbreath. The U. T. co-ed set a mark for her team-mates to shoot by scoring ninety-nine points out of a possible one hundred in a recent marksmanship match with girls' rifle teams of Louisiana State University, University of Maryland, Vermont University and Northwestern University. Included in her scoring were 15 consecutive bulls-eyes.

Recently it was found necessary to remove the hermit to a mental institution, and the police discovered a board of $10,650 in various parts of the rude hut. In every conceivable hiding place was found notes and gold, silver and copper. Boxes, tins and a tool chest were filled with coins. Under a pile of old clothes was $5,000 in silver.

Kiwanis Club members will entertain their wives and women friends at their weekly dinner meeting at the Elks' Club Tuesday evening.

The entertainment committee, composed of Charles Bone, J. H. Whitmer, Edwin Galloway, and T. C. Long, has a good program planned. Each member is urged to be present.

An old water heater, cut to a third of its size, with a piece of glass inserted in the front, and a hose attached, forms the home-made underwater outfit which Robert McLean, of Santa Ana, Cal., wears when he wants to explore the ocean depths for rare specimens. With a friend pumping fresh air to him he can stay at a depth of 35 feet for hours at a time.

RECOVER BODY OF DROWNING VICTIM

SANDUSKY, April 30.—The body of an unidentified man believed to be that of Earl W. Fought, 27, mail carrier, or Carl C. Graves, 34, salesman, both of Fremont, was found in the water off Crystal Rock, near here early today.

Fought and Graves, with C. J. "Clem" Notestine, 27, grocer, whose body was recovered yesterday, disappeared while fishing in an open boat on Sandusky Bay twenty-four days ago.

Despite organized searches by Fremont parties no trace of the men could be found until yesterday when the body of Notestine was found and identified by his widow.

William Schwartz former mayor of Fremont and a father-in-law of Notestine, and Dr. W. S. Bates, who did dental work for the man, also aided in the final identification of Notestine.

BIG GAME HUNTERS CAPTURED

CLEVELAND, O., April 30.—Three Erie, Pa., boys imbued with the "Bar hunting" spirit of Daniel Boone, were on their way home today, their hunting expedition to Kentucky cut off by Cleveland police.

Soot covered and a trifle damp from the overflow of locomotive tank fillers, the boys were found walking along the New York Central railroad tracks by two city detectives and brought to central station for questioning.

Arthur Rathman, 15, wore a wide leather belt, studded with brass plates, from which hung a huge and ancient forty-four. It was unloaded and the cylinder was a trifle wobbly from lack of a pin.

Fred Fouthier, 15, had a big belt also, but it was a little holster and a vest pocket size 32 that hung from it. Felix Schultz, 15, also had a belt, but, unable to get a gun, he had armed himself with a well-honed hunting knife.

He also carried a camera. That, he said was to take pictures of the big game felled in the Kentucky forests. Police notified the parents of the boys, and Carl Rathman, father of Arthur, came here last night to take them home.

PAROLE TWO YOUTHS IN AUTO THEFT CASE

Cases of two of four youths charged with being implicated in the theft of an auto belonging to Marvin Tullis, Husted, O., former Xenian, April 20, were disposed of by Juvenile Judge S. C. Wright, who imposed indeterminate sentences in the Mansfield state reformatory and then paroled them, Monday.

Lewis Hunter, 16, was paroled in the care of his mother, Mrs. Robert Kearney, while Carl Hipshire, 17, was paroled in the custody of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Hipshire.

A third youth, Charles Randall, 17, is already a ward of the court and Judge Wright has not decided what disposition to make of his case. Randall was not connected with the actual theft of the car but is alleged to have received some of the parts stripped from the machine with the knowledge that they were stolen.

Clyde Hughes, 18, the fourth boy accused of being implicated in the case, will face a hearing before Mayor Karl R. Babb next Saturday.

THIRD VICTIM DIES

SPRINGFIELD, O., April 30.—William H. Shelpman, of Washington C. H., is dead here, the third victim of a grade crossing crash near here Sunday. The other victims were Frances Gatewood, 19, and his sister, Gladys, 12, who were being taken to Springfield by Shelpman when his car was hit by a train.

TWO GIVEN FINES ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Charged with possessing liquor, Mrs. Sylvia Null, Osborn, and Floyd Rumer, Fairfield, were each fined $200 and costs Monday by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, who overruled their motions for new trials. They had previously been convicted of the charges.

Mrs. Null was sentenced to the Woman's State Reformatory at Marysville and Rumer to the Cincinnati Workhouse in the event the fines and costs remain unpaid.

STUDENT SOLVES RENTAL PROBLEM

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 30.—John Davenport of Mercer, Mo., wanted to go to college but didn't have the money to pay room rent, so he built his own home and moved it to Trenton so that he could attend junior college there. When he has completed his two-year course he will move his little house to Columbia and finish his college education at the University.

When Davenport wants to "move" he pulls twenty-five bolts and the house is ready to be packed on a truck. He can rebuild in six hours. He plans to settle outside the city limits, or wherever he can find the cheapest site. The house is a one-room affair, heated by a little coal stove. John cooks his own meals on a three-burner oil stove.

He gets his supplies from the store-room of home-canned vegetables and fruits at home. He uses his Ford car to transport the food.

The windows are large and neatly curtained. The furniture is adequate, but meager. The little shelter is electrically lighted.
